Scuthern Missouri vs. Western Kansas. COMPARISON MADE BY PROF. MATHER, OF KANSAS.

STOCKTON, ROOKS Co., Kas., May 26, 1891. EDITOR MISSOURI AND KANSAS FARMER:

DEAR SIR:—In answer to your kind request I will give some of my impressions of the famous Ozark country. I may also say for the benefit of your readers. that I own property in that region, although from the necessity of my occupation, I am at present a resident of Kansas.

In considering the advantages of any locality, many things must be taken into account. Every locality possesses both advantages and disadvantages. From some of the letters published in your paper and written by people living in Western Kansas, Nebraska and Dakota, one unfamiliar with those regions might justly think them destitute of a single redeeming feature. Although the climate is healthful, the soil is good, land cheap and the people among the best, the rainfall is uncertain, living is dear and the winters severe. I am acquainted with a family who came here twelve years ago, all in poor health, with but one team (and one of the horses died two weeks after they arrived) and twenty dollars in money. remove to the locality mentioned would be guilty of a crime. This illustration is an exception, not the rule. The fact is, a great majority of the people living in these localities are in destitute circumstances and through no fault of their own. Many of these people are desirous of changing their location, anxious to go where there are good prospects for bettering their condition. To any such I would not hesitate to say: Go to South Missouri, to that delightful Ozark country. The Ozark region is far ahead of Western

you want to be sure that it is not another mistake. I am amused when I read the many anxious questions in the Farmer from month to month: amused because I had the same nuestionings and forebodings until I became convinced by seeing for myself. My first fear was that the country would prove to be nothing but hills and hollows covered with jagged rocks, woods and brush. This error arises from the misnomer "mountains." The entire re gion is really a great plateau crossed by ranges of hills with prairies intervening, or traversed by rushing streams which are fed by murmuring brooks. Wherever streams abound you find broken country. There were no fires to burn off the timber—as was probably the case in Kansas, Nebraska and Dakota so the forest gradually crept from the water ways and now covers most of the land not in cultivation. I have seen as high hills in Kansas-the Flint Hills; in Nebraska, the hills near the Missouri river; and in Iowa near the Cedar and Des Moines Rivers than I observed among the Ozarks. I have traveled much and have never beheld a more beautiful and prosperous country than the prairies dotted with woods in the region of Springfield. Land in that section is comparatively high-priced but land that can be purchased cheap because it has timber upon it. I purchased a prairie farm recently, and after the bargain had A 3 roomed house at $5 per month. Also a 4 roomed house for $5. Apply been made, the owner threw in or a man from the Dakotas to more modern houses, handsome sightly, built by the new comer, who brought money with him or by children of the well-to-do farmers of the last generation. If anyone supposes that no elegant farm houses with fine improvements exist in South Missouri, he has but to take a trip over the Memphis Railroad to disabuse his mind of that erroneous idea. Last, are the log-| houses, near the timber. Many of them are comfortable and roomy, and owned by thrifty farmers who are making money.
